

A Prayer for You

From the article “How to Create a Prayer Room at Home: A Simple Space to Meet With God”

Father, thank You that You are not far away and never have been. Thank You that I don't have to earn a place at Your feet, decorate my way into Your presence, or wait until my life looks put together before I come to You.

I'm asking You to help me build something small and steady. Give me the honesty to admit how distracted I've been and the grace not to drown in guilt about it. Teach me to be still — that part is hard for me. My mind runs, my list is long, and quiet feels like wasted time until You meet me in it.

Make this corner of my home a place where I tell You the truth. Where I bring the worry I've been carrying alone, the people I love, the things I can't fix, and the parts of me I don't like very much. Speak to me through Your Word. Where I read without understanding, give me understanding. Where I read and feel nothing, hold me steady until I do.

When I miss a day, remind me that You are not keeping score, and bring me back without shame. When I sit down faithfully and nothing seems to change, help me trust that You are working in ways I can't measure yet.

I'm not asking for a perfect prayer room. I'm asking for a willing heart, and for Your presence to be the thing I want most. In Jesus' name, amen.

Amen.
